Late 18th Century Original Gilt and Painted Architectural Arch Fragment, Portugal

Late 18th century large architectural fragment from Portugal, retaining its original painted finish. The curved form is especially decorative, with original carved gold gilt flourishes set against a steel gray with blue undertone background. The base /back (to which the front is attached) also reveals some residual red. This very old piece shows age related separation in multiple places, along with cracks, nicks, some loss to the plaster, and areas of paint loss, all consistent with age and use. Evidence of old, dried worm holes (non-active).
Stable and ready to hang, this is a highly decorative and unique accent piece with wonderful scale, color, and old-world character.
